Product Concept: Here, you should identify:
• Product configuration generally – features, benefits, attributes

A ready to eat cereal designed to stay crunchy longer in milk. Each cereal piece uses a moisture resistant coating to slow milk absorption. This would allow kids to enjoy their cereal for a longer time. The product will come in kid friendly flavors and shapes, with nutrients parents feel comfortable buying. The package would clearly highlight the longer lasting crunch.

• Positioning –what benefit is your customer seeking and on what basis will you differentiate from the competition

The main benefit customers seek is cereal that does not become soggy before being finished. We differentiate from competitors by focusing on how the cereal holds up in milk instead of just flavors or how it looks. Most cereals focus on taste and branding, but ours focuses on fixing a common breakfast issue.

• Value Proposition

Our cereal helps parents reduce wasted food and morning stress by staying crunchy longer in milk. Kids enjoy their breakfast from start to finish, and parents feel better about pouring a full bowl. Compared to traditional cereals, this product makes breakfast better without asking families to do anything differently.

Prospective Target Market [Cannot be college students]
Who is your target customer and why?

Parents or guardians of children ages 5 - 12 who eat cereal for breakfast slowly. We chose this market because parents purchase cereal regularly and often deal with soggy cereal for breakfast which they might not want to finish during busy mornings. Which leads to waste of food and frustration. This product fixes that problem by maintaining cereal texture, so the kids can take as long as they need to eat it, making breakfast easier and less wasteful for families.
